January First slated as 'Day of Peace'

Pope asks worldwide observance

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul VI called on Catholics around the world and on "all men of goodwill" to observe January 1 and every other New Year's Day as a special day of prayer for world peace.

At the same time, the pontiff rebuked the "cowardice of those who fear it may be their duty to give their lives for the service of their own country and of their own brothers when these are engaged in the defense of justice and liberty."

He chided those who "seek only flight from their responsibility and risks that are necessarily involved in the accomplishment of great duties of generous exploits."

Pope Paul asserted that peace "is not passivism. It does not mark a base and loathful concept of life but it proclaims the highest and most universal values of life, truth, justice, freedom and love."

"It is for the protection of these values," he continued, "that we place them beneath the banner of peace and that we invite men and nations to raise at the dawn of the New Year this banner which must guide the ship of civilization through the inescapable storms of history to the harbor of its highest destiny."

THE POPE made his dramatic appeal for peace prayers, as well as a denunciation of war, armaments, "revolutionary provocations," racial hatreds and "the spirit of revenge," in his first message on world affairs since he underwent surgery November 4.

The papal document was dated December 8, Feast of the Immaculate Conception, but was just released. It was divided into two parts—both dealing with peace and war (without mention of Vietnam), but with the first section addressed to "all men of goodwill," and the second to the Catholic hierarchy, priests and faithful.

In the statement, he reiterated his oft-voiced condemnation of atomic warfare and of excessive expenditures on armaments instead of the world's needy, and his support of the United Nations as an instrument for world peace and of peaceful negotiations.

Pope Paul said he did not intend to make an annual Day of Prayer for Peace solely a Catholic observance, but hoped to have "the adherence of all the true friends of peace, as if it were, their own initiative, to be expressed in a free manner, congenial to the particular character of those who are aware of how beautiful and important it is."

He said that the Catholic Church "with the intention of service and of example simply wishes to launch the idea in the hope that it may not only be (Continued on page 9)

Reminder

The Chancery Office this week reminded the faithful that those who receive Holy Communion during the Christmas Midnight Mass may receive again at one of the Masses celebrated during Christmas Day.

Announcement was also made that the Indianapolis Archdiocesan Ordo, used by the diocesan clergy, will not be made available by the Paulist Press for distribution until after the first of January.

Teaching nuns voted salary hike

Salaries of teaching Sisters in the Archdiocese will jump to $1,600 during the 1968-69 school year as a result of action taken by the Archdiocesan School Board at its December 14 meeting.

An increase to $1,800 annually will take effect in 1970, the Board ruled. (Sisters in Archdiocesan schools now receive $1,200 per year.)

The Board also approved a change in the School Office fiscal year from August 1-July 31 to July 1-June 30.

In a report to the Board on the current Catholic Education Study, Father George Elford, Study director, stated that a special education issue of "Marian" magazine will be distributed in all parishes of the Archdiocese Sunday, Jan. 7. The magazine will feature in-depth articles on all phases of Catholic education contributed by Mary Perkins Ryan, Michael Schiltz, Brother Gabriel Moran, F.S.C., and other noted writers.

PARISH discussions on the Education Study will start the week of January 14 continuing through the week of February 4, Father Elford told the Board. A series of four weekly sessions will be scheduled in each parish of the Archdiocese.

Training meetings for parish discussion leaders will be held as follows: January 3, Memorial High School, Evansville; January 10, (Continued on page 9)

Archbishop's Christmas Letter

TO THE CLERGY, RELIGIOUS AND LAITY OF THE ARCHDIOCESE OF INDIANAPOLIS Greetings:

As we approach the beautiful Feast of Christmas we are instinctively carried back in spirit to the Stable of Bethlehem and the Babe born there nineteen hundred years ago. And our thoughts become occupied with the mystery of our redemption and the many facets of its meaning for us.

Christ came primarily to redeem man from his sins. For this purpose He suffered and died on the cross. He effected our redemption and to bring the fruits of that redemption to all mankind down through the ages. He founded His Church. From Christ's own words at its founding it is evident that its purpose was to bring the glad tidings of the Gospel to the whole world and to pour the saving grace of salvation upon souls through the Sacraments with which He endowed it. That was and still is the purpose of Christ's Church in the world.

Today there seems to be a tendency on the part of some, perhaps well meaning but misguided, men and women, to put the emphasis of mankind to the detriment of its first and spiritual mission of saving souls. Consequently there seems to be evolving a religion of secular humanism for which we can find no foundation in the words of Christ. Christ came to save souls; not to eliminate bodily ills. He did not come to make a paradise of the world but He did promise Heaven to those who accepted His word, and followed His teachings.

He whose birthday we are preparing to celebrate, and who proclaimed Himself to be the Son of God spent His entire life in promoting the glory of His Heavenly Father. We too must make the first aim of our life the promotion of God's honor and glory by our love and worship. The very concept of our creation by Him demands this. This too is what places such a high value upon the sacred liturgy and our faithfulness in carrying it out.

God must come first in our life. It is the appreciation of this fact that leads us to build magnificent churches in which God may be worshiped with fitting liturgy, and schools in which our children can be taught His sacred truths. It is the appreciation of this fact too that motivates us in the solitude we have for the spiritual welfare of our students in our secular universities.

The Center which we are erecting upon the Campus of the Indiana University is not being built to provide recreational facilities but to give to the students a place for the fulfillment of their religious duties, and to which they may go to find the spiritual instruction and guidance so badly needed at our secular universities to supplement and counteract the materialistic ideals and attitudes to be found there.

For your information we may say that the Center will be ready for occupancy by mid-summer but at a cost of some $750,000.00 of which amount we have $300,000.00 on hand. We are appealing to you, therefore, at this time for the $450,000.00 still needed for the project. It has been suggested by the Archdiocesan Consultors that the Christmas collection this year be allocated toward this end, and we are amenable to the suggestion. The ordinary Christmas collection, however, has never exceeded $150,000.00 so we are asking that for this one time you make your Christmas offering three times what you have been accustomed to give in the past. Let it be your gift to the Christ Child. He will appreciate and reward your generosity.

Bestowing upon you our own humble benediction and begging God to bless you most bountifully, we remain,

In the service of Jesus and His Immaculate Mother,

ST. NICHOLAS, OF COURSE

Fabled Santa Claus, Indiana, may have a Catholic parish

By JEFF HAYS

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus—and a whole new village is being created to be near him. Santa Claus lives about a 45-minute drive from Evansville in the rolling hills of Spencer County in a town that bears his name. Up till now he has gone about his cheery business of making toys and spreading joy in relative isolation from the urban sprawl and tension that has been changing the face of America. Santa's main contact with this world has been through the thousands of letters he receives yearly, usually addressed: Santa Claus, North Pole.

What's in a name?

When the announcement was made that a parish to be named St. Nicholas was being considered at Santa Claus, Ind., Father Fidelis Jent, O.S.B., who is to be the pastor, took some good-natured ribbing.

One National Catholic newspaper headlined the short news story with: "And the pastor will be nicknamed Adeste." When told of this, the amiable Father Fidelis laughingly replied, "Wait till they hear that one of my advisors is Frater Noel from the (St. Meinrad) Archabbey."

No more. Soon he will have about 5,000 new neighbors in Christmas Lake Village — a multi-million dollar dream of Evansville industrialist William Koch.

THIS DREAM is already taking shape. Roads, with such names as Elf Drive, Nativity Lane and Three Kings Road, already have their street signs in place. Fifteen homes are already built or under construction. A 7,155-yard championship golf course will be ready to open next spring. A 300-acre lake with nine miles of shore line has already been built. Soon a motel and convention center will be constructed to attract "family-oriented" conventions from all over the country.

All this, plus the already established tourist attractions at Santa Claus Land and Lincoln City State Park (four miles away) mean people—lots of them.

When there are this many people gathering — mostly on week-ends — the Church shows an interest in caring for their needs. Bishop Paul Leibold has authorized Father Fidelis Jent, O.S.B., to plan the Church involvement at Santa Claus Land with an eye for establishing a possible parish there.

Father Fidelis, the former pastor at St. Anthony, Ind., has moved into Spencer County at nearby Maria Hill, six miles from Santa Claus. He has been meeting with area citizens, land owners, and officials from the eight other religious denominations in the country.

"We don't know just what shape the future parish of Santa Claus will take," says the energetic Benedictine monk, "but we know there is going to be plenty of action in the area and the Church should be where the action is."

IN THE PAST several months, Father Fidelis has combed the countryside getting ideas for the parish. He has committees at St. Meinrad, Ferdinand and Spencer County. He has met several times with the Protestant ministers of the area.

Since the Protestant leaders of the county are also showing interest in the potential influx of people in the Santa Claus area, an "interesting" ecumenical opportunity is developing, Father Fidelis points out.

"We are exploring the idea of building one church building to be used by all the religious congregations of the area," he says. "This idea might not work out, but it has exciting possibilities."

When Father Fidelis was first appointed to explore the potential of a "St. Nicholas" parish at Santa Claus, many people scoffed at the proposal. A visit to the area will convince all skeptics that what was once only a dream is fast becoming a reality.

Cathedral plans Midnight Mass

INDIANAPOLIS — A Solemn Midnight Mass will be celebrated Christmas Eve at St. Peter and Paul Cathedral in the presence of Archbishop Schulte who will preside and deliver his Christmas homily. Very Rev. Francis Van Bente, Cathedral rector, will be the celebrant.

The Archbishop will offer a Solemn Pontifical Mass in the Cathedral at 11 a.m. Christmas morning, assisted by the Cathedral clergy.

The Schola Cantorum, under the direction of Renato Pacini, associate conductor of the Indianapolis Symphony, will sing at both Masses.

No Criterion on December 29

In keeping with a practice inaugurated in 1961, no issue of The Criterion will be published on December 29 to permit our hard-working staff a holiday and to give the paper a few days to handle some year-end administrative details. The next issue will be that of January 5, 1968. The first Evansville edition of The Criterion will also appear on that date. The Criterion offices will be closed Friday, Dec. 22, through Wednesday, Dec. 27.

GREETING TOP CITIZEN—Father Fidelis Jent, O.S.B., organizing pastor of the proposed St. Nicholas parish at Santa Claus, Ind., stops to chat with one of his future parishioners, Santa Claus himself.

NCEA planning weekly seminars

WASHINGTON — Beginning January 27, the National Catholic Educational Association will sponsor a series of Saturday Seminars on topics of concern to educators.

Purpose of the seminars, according to the NCEA, is to stimulate discussion among educators about common problems, and to acquaint Catholic educators with specialists in various fields who are available through the NCEA office.

FESTIVITIES PERMITTED

Reds in Eastern Europe drop idea of abolishing Christmas

BONN, Germany—The communist regimes of eastern Europe have apparently abandoned their attempts to abolish Christmas festivities, and this year church-going, gift-giving and family celebrations will mark the feast day.

In the attempt to do away with the feast, the authorities had tried to replace Santa Claus with a Soviet-style Father Frost and called Christmas the "Winter Holiday."

An indication of how things have changed is that when East Germany this year abolished most religious holidays throughout the year to compensate for the introduction of the five-day working week, it did not touch the two-day Christmas holiday "because of long-standing traditions."

Along with Poland and Czechoslovakia, East Germany even provides extra pay for those who have to work on the holiday. It also provides Christmas bonuses under certain conditions, although not on the lavish scale of Poland, where workers receive an extra month's pay in December.

HOWEVER, not all news is good in East Europe this Christmas. Although there are more toys and other gifts and a better choice of Christmas foodstuffs, prices have also risen. In Poland, in late November, increases in the price of meat and poultry, in some cases up to 32%, made prospects for Christmas dinner bleak. In Czechoslovakia, price increases are expected as the regime battles to control developing inflation.

For hundreds of families there is the misery of separation; the inability to cross the borders freely for family reunions with those who escaped to the West.

Christmas Day is celebrated at the same time as in the West except in Bulgaria and parts of Yugoslavia where, according to the Orthodox calendar, it falls on January 7. In Bulgaria, Rumania and Yugoslavia there is no Christmas holiday, but the other regimes generally allow two days.

Toys for children are a characteristic feature of Christmas, but in most of East Europe, they do not normally include military weapons, although many are related to space and science. One of the big buys in Hungary this year is a moon rocket, which chugs along until it hits something, when it automatically straightens around and the cabin door flies open so the pilot can eject.

Interest in the better life is shown in toys (many from East Germany) such as model Fiat and Mercedes cars. Working models of Soviet jetliners are also popular.

Such things as walking dolls, radio-controlled model aircraft, and various mechanical toys are available in small quantities, but most are extremely expensive. In Czechoslovakia, a radio-controlled model airplane costs about half the average man's monthly salary.

GOOSE, TURKEY and ham are the usual main fare on Christmas tables with carp and other fish traditional on Christmas eve. The festive table contains mushroom soup, fish prepared in various ways, noodles with poppyseed, and lots of cake,

BREBEUF EXCHANGE STUDENT

Likes everything but weather

INDIANAPOLIS—The Indiana weather may be nothing to brag about, but at least the schools aren't open six days a week.

Jose Llamazalez, a Brebeuf Preparatory School student from Valparaiso, Chile, has been in the United States since August. He likes Hoosier basketball and the American high school academic schedule of six or seven subjects presented five days a week. At home, Jose explains, students take about 13 courses a year and attend school Monday through Saturday.

Although he had studied English 11 years before coming to this country, the young Chilean found the rapid-fire conversation of the classroom hard to follow. Easier to understand was American rock 'n' roll which is as popular south of the border as it is here. Jose now plays the flute in the Brebeuf band.

WHEN HE returns to Chile next July, he will enroll at Santa Maria University to study engineering. Some day Jose plans to return to the United States—perhaps to work and live here. With the exception of the Hoosier cold weather, he finds everything else "simpatico."

Mr. and Mrs. John Stark, Jr., members of St. Pius X parish, are Jose's hosts during his student year in this country. The Starks and Brebeuf are cooperating with the International High School Student Program of the U.S. Catholic Conference which has sponsored Catholic students from Europe and Latin America in this country since 1951.

Students are selected on the basis of competitive examinations at home. National committees review and evaluate the credentials and character of all applicants, who must be in good health, have superior scholastic records, some knowledge of English, parental permission, and letters of recommendation from a parish priest and teachers.

THE U.S. Catholic Conference handles all administrative details in getting the students to this country, and provides insurance coverage and a travel allotment. The U.S.C.C. also arranges for the student to be enrolled in a Catholic high school as a scholarship student. Host families provide board and room, while the student's family supplies incidental spending money and clothing.

Deadline for applications to serve as a host family next year is February 1, 1968, according to Msgr. Thomas J. Leonard, Youth Department Director, U.S.C.C. Further details may be obtained from: International High School Student Program, United States Catholic Conference, 1312 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005.

Notre Dame sets alumni Seminar

Child Jesus. In Poland, East Germany and Czechoslovakia children are also visited on December 6 by St. Nicholas and his helper, who reward the good and punish the bad.

CAROL SINGERS still troop through the snow-covered villages singing the old carols. Only in Bulgaria have they totally disappeared under communism, although they are also discouraged in Rumania, particularly in the towns and cities.

Generally, the children are dressed as the three kings who followed the Star to Bethlehem, and are followed by an entourage dressed as angels, shepherds, and other characters from the Bible. The child in front carries a long staff with a star at the top. In the center, a group carries a model of a stable with the Christ Child in a manger surrounded by Mary, Joseph, the kings and angels.

Standing in the snow outside a house they sing traditional local carols in return for a few coins, or biscuits or sweets.

Traditionally, the most important church service for Catholics in East Europe is the Christmas midnight Mass.

For Protestants in East Germany the main service is on Christmas morning.

Everywhere, however, the churches are packed and with rare exceptions Christians worship the birth of Christ in peace.

INDIANAPOLIS—"Has Change Run Away With the Church?" is the theme of a University of Notre Dame Alumni Seminar, scheduled for January 21 in the World War Memorial Auditorium, 431 N. Meridian St. The seminar, co-sponsored by the Notre Dame Club of Indianapolis and the Center for Continuing Education at Notre Dame, is the second in a series of programs for alumni, designed to generate dialogue on important contemporary issues. The 1966-67 seminar discussed population problems.

The seminar starts at 1 p.m. and is open to Notre Dame alumni, their wives and guests. The registration fee of $10, which includes dinner, is payable to the Center for Continuing Education at Notre Dame.

Speakers and topics include: "Can You Pray at Mass?" Father Aelred Tegels, O.S.B., editor of Worship magazine; "New Sins and Old Commandments," Father Charles Sheedy, C.S.C., dean of the College of Arts and Letters; "Wanted Dead or Alive: God," Father Albert L. Schlitzer, head of the department of theology; and "Why Bother Being a Catholic?" Dr. J. Phillip Gleason, assistant professor of history.

Discussions selected from local alumni and friends of Notre Dame will respond to each presentation.

New affiliates

MINNEAPOLIS—The National Association of Laymen has announced that it has added two new local affiliates to the 18 already belonging to the association. The new affiliates are the Society of Christian Renewal of Worcester, Mass., and the New Jersey Association of Laymen, formed in the Newark archdiocese.

ALTERNATIVES IN CATHOLIC EDUCATION

No 'blueprint' for the future

By EDNA FOLZ

What is the future of Catholic Schools? This is the question always asked by parents, pastors and school officials. But there is no pat answer.

When some of the nation's leading Catholics—liberal and conservative—and secular educators were called together in Washington last month, by the National Catholic Education Association for a celebrated symposium to draw up a "blueprint for the future" of Catholic education, they came up with more questions but no "blueprint" of answers. The 110 delegates to that gathering went home tired and left the numerous reports on discussions in the hands of a committee of 12 to draw up "recommendations" for Catholic education.

One thing all this pointed out clearly, however, was the need for research. Those participating in the symposium found themselves groping in the dark because they had no facts, figures or depth information on the present efforts in Catholic education beyond the general knowledge that most of the Church's resources are going into the 13,150 Catholic elementary and secondary schools which enroll nearly six million pupils.

ACCORDING to the NCEA "Superintendents' Report" following the symposium, "research should precede radical changes in structure" of Catholic education. Cited as examples to follow were the joint study of Indianapolis, Louisville and Evansville, one proposed for the state of Michigan, and one now underway in Denver.

The National Conference of Catholic Bishops held following the symposium also agreed on the need for research. "Like our colleagues in this teaching apostolate, we too do not want to go beyond our means, nor to dilute quality for the sake of quantity nor to expend excessive resources on one kind of education with consequent neglect of other forms," the bishops declared. "We therefore acknowledge the immediate need for more research to evaluate our present endeavors, to project our future responsibilities, and to make a thorough inventory of our resources in personnel and finance."

Finance is a major issue. No one knows what Catholic education costs. One U.S. Office of Education official at the symposium warned that Catholic schools "face a very serious credibility problem" in seeking federal aid. "Complete disclosure of financial operation" is an almost necessary prerequisite for the schools to share in new aid, he said.

From the mass building program carried out for decades by Catholic parishes to provide schools, all funds were put into brick and mortar, then came the current squeeze on costs of operation and the hiring of lay teachers which left research as something no one had time nor money to even think about.

FIGURING OUT the cost of educating a child in a Catholic elementary school is still an estimation at best since the book-keeping of many parishes lump the entire operation of the school, convent and church into one maintenance account, pay of the nuns is unrealistic and the intertwining of activities is hard to untangle.

While money is an undeciding factor in all education, where to put the money available is a major issue. In the opening sessions of the NCEA symposium the dominating issue was the role of Catholic education in serving Negroes and the deprived in the country's urban ghettos while Catholic schools are generally following the white, middle-class Catholics to the suburbs.

Education, now fully recognized as an important weapon against the devastating poverty of the urban ghettos and rural wastelands, perhaps could and should be the mission of the Catholic Church to the poor. The delegates emphasized the need for equalized financing and for obtaining revenues from sources outside the poor areas served.

The bishops were less forceful in this area, stating a broadened concept of the teacher's apostolate "is especially relevant in those areas where the poor and oppressed depend on Catholic schools for their education." In these areas the bishops urged teachers to take the lead in experimenting and finding better educational techniques.

Most symposium delegates and the bishops agreed there is great need for continued experiments in education, that Catholic schools must continue for they are making a contribution to the well-being of the Church in general, to religious and cultural life, and to civil society.

In a rapidly evolving church and society the only sure answer to the future of Catholic education is that it will change.

Change will bring problems. Already some of these are being faced as laymen are taking over responsibilities on school boards or boards of education.

THE LONG tradition of a hierarchy that has dictated what has been done is hard to break, and at open meetings where laymen gather to consider the problems, there is still that "Father, what should we do?"

Father James Lex, director of the Catholic Education office of the Diocese of Evansville, who with the members of the Diocesan Board of Education, conducted open meetings in various communities of the diocese, gave this answer: "That is what you are going to have to decide. Each area is going to have to determine what its needs are and what will work best for it."

He also warned there is no one answer, and what works well during one period may not work as situations and thought changes.

OTHER MEETINGS SEEN

Catholic-Orthodox talks 'successful'

ROME — All participants in formal conversations between Roman Catholics and Russian Orthodox in Leningrad "are convinced that these first contacts between experts of the two churches were extremely useful," according to a joint communique of the two delegations.

The communique, issued in Moscow and Rome two days after the end (Dec. 13) of the five-day meeting, indicated that these first contacts would not be the last.

"Both groups were unanimous in feeling that similar meetings for discussing problems of mutual interest will be useful in the future," said the communique, which was signed by Bishop Jan Willebrands, secretary of the Vatican Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity, and Bishop Juvenaly, Catholic and Orthodox co-chairmen of the meetings.

The conversations dealt with the social thought of the Roman Catholic Church both in its historical context since the end of the 19th century and especially in its most recent expression in the encyclicals of Pope John XXIII and Pope Paul VI and in the decisions of the Second Vatican Council," the communique specified.

BOTH DURING and after the meeting, Catholic and Orthodox delegates attended each other's religious services. Sources in Rome expressed the opinion that this form of ecumenical activity was just as important as the doctrinal conversations themselves.

On December 14 the Catholic delegation travelled to Moscow where all members were received that evening by Orthodox Patriarch Alexei of Moscow and All Russia.

Besides Bishop Willebrands and Father John Long, S.J., of New York, an official of the unity secretariat, the Catholic delegation was comprised of three internationally known experts in Catholic social doctrine: Msgr. Pietro Pavan of Rome's Pontifical Lateran University (who is generally credited with outlining Pope John XXIII's social encyclical, Mater et Magistra), Father Jean Calvez, S.J., provincial superior of the French Jesuits and an expert on Marxist doctrine, and Msgr. George G. Higgins, director of the Social Action Department of the United States Catholic Conference.

Bishop Willebrands had proposed the meetings. He acted on the basis of a report by Metropolitan Nikodim of Leningrad and Novgorod on "Dialogue with Roman Catholics Concerning Contemporary Christian Social Thought." Metropolitan Nikodim, who is president of the Orthodox Moscow patriarchate's department for external church affairs, delivered his report two summers ago at a World Council of Churches Conference on Church and Society in Geneva, Switzerland.

Metropolitan Nikodim invited the Catholic delegates to meet Orthodox delegates at the Leningrad Theological Academy.

The Russian Orthodox team was headed by Bishop Juvenaly, who is vice-president of the Moscow patriarchate's department of external church affairs.

THE DISCUSSIONS were based on papers delivered by the participants. Prof. Ogitsky and Father Calvez gave papers on social thought from Pope Leo XIII to Pope John XXIII; Prof. Voronov and Msgr. Higgins on the social thought of the Second Vatican Council; and Msgr. Pavan, Prof. Zabolotsky and Bouevsky on the social encyclicals of Pope John XXIII (including Paeem in Terris) and Pope Paul VI.

The "cordial and frank exchange of opinions" that followed each exposition, the communique said, touched on the Church's competence in the social field, the relationship between the individual and society, the development of Catholic doctrine concerning property, and on various other points.

The participants prayed together daily and assisted at various liturgical services of each other's Church. The communique stated all of them "felt the close spiritual bonds existing among them."

On December 10 Bishop Willebrands preached during an Orthodox Liturgy celebrated at the consecration of the new Orthodox Bishop of Tokyo, Bishop Nicholas. The entire Catholic delegation was present.

The same day Metropolitan Nikodim, Bishop Michael, and all the Orthodox participants assisted at a Mass celebrated by the entire Catholic delegation in the Catholic church of Our Lady of Lourdes.

THE ORTHODOX authorities put the chapel of the Leningrad Theological Academy at the disposition of the Catholic delegation on the evening of December 13. All members of the Catholic delegation concelebrated a Mass which all Orthodox delegates, Bishop Michael and the professors and students of the seminary attended.

An audience for the Catholics in the following night at the Moscow patriarchate "was marked by an extremely cordial atmosphere," the communique said.

LAUNCH NEW RETREAT PROJECT—Our Lady of Fatima and Alverna Retreat Houses will co-sponsor an Archdiocesan Retreat Conference for all chief promoters and others interested in the retreat movement. The one-day conference is scheduled from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 6, at Fatima, 5353 E. 54th St. Serving as co-chairmen of the event are Miss Marcella Eischens and Charles LaFebre; shown above with the directors of the two retreat houses, Father Kenny C. Sweeney, of Fatima, left, and Father Harvey Kochner, O.F.M., of Alverna. Miss Eischens is president-elect of Our Lady of Fatima Retreat League; LaFebre is vice-president of the Alverna Retreat Captains.

ADVENT ART—Father Eugene Weidman, above, pastor of St. Pius parish, Troy, recently commissioned a Lutheran clergyman, Rev. John E. Schroeder, right, to design eight banners with symbols and legends expressing the themes of the "O Antiphons." The oil paintings were executed by Mrs. June Poehlein, of Tell City, a free lance artist.

Recollection set for non-Catholics Sunday, Jan. 7th

INDIANAPOLIS — Msgr. Raymond T. Bosler, pastor of Little Flower parish and editor of The Criterion, will conduct the annual Inter-Faith Day of Recollection for non-Catholic men and women to be held at Our Lady of Fatima Retreat House on Sunday, Jan. 7.

The event, sponsored by the Fatima Retreat League, will have Miss Marcella Eischens as general chairman. Purpose of the Recollection Day, according to Miss Eischens, "is to instill a deeper spiritual zeal in all participants as well as to share Christian insights."

Catholics may attend if accompanied by a non-Catholic. Reservations can be made directly with the Retreat House (546-7900). Deadline is January 1.

"HOW TO DESTROY OLD MEDICINES"

by BERNARD KEENE, Jr., Pharmacist

I've talked before about the need to throw out old medications that clutter up your bathroom cabinet. Very often they will have deteriorated or spoiled.

But perhaps you've wondered: "How do I get rid of them? Throw them in the garbage?"

No! Never do that! Always, either burn them or, if they're liquids, flush them into the sewer system. Every year there are tragic cases of small children and pets finding and eating discarded medications in waste baskets and garbage cans. Sometimes, prompt action has saved their lives. Sometimes it has not.

So do, please, be careful. And if I can be of any help to you in determining whether an old prescription is worth saving, stop in and ask me, won't you?

Sisters move to adopt democratic procedures

ST. LOUIS—The general chapter of the Sisters of St. Joseph of Carondelet has urged members to assume more individual responsibility, through democratic nomination and election procedures, and called for the formation of a policy-making body elected by the Sisters.

The Sisters of St. Joseph of Carondelet number 4,500 teaching and nursing members serving in the United States, Latin America and Japan. The general chapter met here to refine concepts of religious government and administration. The next such meeting will be held in 1969.

(Located in the Indianapolis Archdiocese since 1878, the Sisters staff Sacred Heart, St. Roch's and Holy Angels parish schools and Kennedy Memorial High School.)

THE CHAPTER issued a statement reaffirming the congregation's effort to serve the Church through the elimination of misery and ignorance. It also called on the Sisters to "be creative, not only in improving old methods, but in finding new forms of service in the areas of their apostolate."

"The times demand... that the congregation assume leadership in cooperating with ecclesiastical, civil, and regional planning groups to study contemporary needs and to respond to them," it stated.

IN THE AREA of individual responsibility, it encouraged each Sister to contribute to and draw support from the community according to her needs and abilities.

Diocese issues unity guidelines

PITTSBURGH — Catholics in the Pittsburgh diocese may, for the first time, join the YMCA, YWCA or YMHA with Church approval under official guidelines for ecumenical activities recently issued here.

An official booklet, "Guidelines in Ecumenical Activities for the Diocese of Pittsburgh," published by the diocesan commission for ecumenism, declares that "where provisions for respect of faith and conscience are made, Catholics may join such organizations and participate in their social, athletic and educational programs."

Bishop John J. Wright of Pittsburgh requested that the guidelines be drawn up and gave them his imprimatur. The guidelines are the result of 10 months of work and consultations by a subcommittee appointed by the diocesan commission for ecumenism.

The booklet is the diocese's first official set of directives on religious activity with non-Catholics. It codifies both new directives and old ones issued on an individual basis by clergy of diocesan departments.

The opinions expressed in these editorial columns represent a Catholic viewpoint—not necessarily THE Catholic viewpoint. They are efforts of the editors to serve public opinion within the Church and within the Nation.

Christmas, 1967

IN A THOUSAND different ways during the weeks ahead the Church repeatedly tells us that The Word Was Made Flesh. And in a thousand different ways she strains to make us grasp the joy and mystery embodied in the coming of the one Person in whom the nature of man and the nature of God is united.

We cannot really understand. The full import is beyond our small minds and narrow visions. Perhaps more pertinent, it is beyond our limited capacity of loving and knowing love—to conceive that the omnipotence of God could willingly suffer being encased within the confining, humbling cloak of humanity.

But the Babe in the manger is God's love for us made visible and so engaging, so winsome in newborn artlessness is He that we can forget what awesome might is present and rush forward to fondle the infant, without fear or hesitation.

The four weeks of Advent preparation are almost over. Now at the winter solstice darkness begins to give way to light. From now on the days grow a little longer as night recedes ever so slightly.

It is a time of year which thrilled the ancient pagans who looked forward in trepidation lest the light not be reborn again. When the added glimmer was confirmed, great rejoicing and ritual thanksgiving began. How much more imperative for us is the rebirth of hope and spiritual light that comes with each Christmas. How much more is there to rejoice and be thankful for.

It is time now to be still. Enough of the hustle and bustle, the noise and crush that jars the nerves and impairs the judgment. Too easily we lose the sense of what is important and what is not. We dare not let that happen now.

The moment is at hand when man must be prepared to receive with grace and a grateful heart that perfect Christmas gift.

"God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son."

The Scrooges . . .

THE U.S. Senate prides itself on being known as the world's most exclusive gentlemen's club. Which, of course, is a laugh unless one uses some way-out definition of the word "gentleman."

Last week Senator Russell B. Long (D., La.), majority whip, employed some pretty low cunning to frustrate opponents of extremely objectionable features in the Social Security bill. In their hurry to get home for a month-long holiday, most of the gentlemen—including Vance Hartke and Birch Bayh of Indiana—strung along with Long.

The measure increases Social Security payments by 13 per cent, which is far too little. But the genuinely scandalous aspects of the bill rushed into law by the gentlemen's club are its irresponsible and cruel welfare provisions.

One provision uses a formula that will arbitrarily freeze the number of youngsters receiving federal aid to dependent children, regardless of need. States will have to make up the difference or cut back on the number of recipients. We easily can guess which will happen in Indiana, where the prevalent attitude is that most welfare recipients are either lazy or fraudulent.

Another provision punishes the mothers of helpless children. Regardless of how desperately they are needed at home, the new law forces them to leave their infants and school-age youngsters, incur the expense of their day care, and take jobs or job training. Still another feature provides birth control programs to combat illegitimacy.

The vast majority, although not all, of the welfare recipients who will suffer will be Negro mothers and children. Msgr. Lawrence J. Corcoran, executive secretary of the National Council of Catholic Charities, last week denounced the measure as "unworthy of the humanitarian roots of our society."

But, then, the members of the gentlemen's club—being gentlemen who enjoy the good things of life like everybody else—were in a hurry to get home. We hope they savor their roast duck and amontillado Christmas day and don't choke to death on their richly deserved food and drink if they happen suddenly to remember there was One Who said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me. . . ."

. . . and the ghosts

BEFORE leaving Washington last week our noble lawmakers also voted the stingiest foreign aid appropriation in 20 years—$2.29 billion. This was nearly $1 billion less than the President indifferently had sought.

Representative Otto Passman (D., La.), implacable enemy of foreign assistance, called the outcome "the greatest victory ever." Well, it was a victory—although not in the sense Passman meant. It was a victory for the Four Horsemen who ride across an earth where 10,000 children die of malnutrition every day. It was a victory over the hopes of countless millions to win the terrible race against famine.

At about the same time Passman was patting himself on the back, Pope Paul was speaking from his window above St. Peter's Square. He urged Christians everywhere to forego Christmas waste and help the world's poor.

Passman and his fellow congressional foes of "foreign giveaways" have roamed the world first-class and at public expense. But few of them ever have bothered to go into the back streets of Calcutta and see the unspeakable hell of the forsaken poor. Few ever have left the sunny elegance of Rio's Copacabana beach and gone up the steep hillsides to the favela, the notorious slums, where 700,000 of the most wretched people on earth exist.

To our pork-barreling, free-wheeling lawmakers who refuse to share more than a puny fraction of this nation's fantastic wealth in a world where two-thirds of the people are desperately hungry, the living skeletons of Calcutta, Rio and a thousand other places are just ghosts—unseen, unheard, unreal.

Jacob Marley and the three Christmas ghosts had no influence on Ebenezer Scrooge either until they actually appeared before him. Then he dramatically changed his ways for the better. Would that some similar traumatic experience reform the anti-foreign-aid crowd before it is too late and the "third world" of human misery comes into violent collision with the affluent West.

The Yule wanderers

THROUGH at least a third of the years of this bloody century the United States has had substantial bodies of men at arms in areas of the world far from their native shores.

Today about 1.4 million American troops are abroad, more than 600,000 of them in Vietnam. Others are scattered all over the globe from Greenland to Latin America and from Germany to Korea.

This season tries the heart of any Christmas wanderer, whether he be a soldier, a traveling salesman or an oil driller. Thoughts of family, hearth and home weigh with special heaviness upon men in uniform—and on none so much as those at the fighting front, too close to enemy guns to get the hot turkey dinners we always read about in the newspapers.

Let us remember them this Christmas weekend—these young men with guns in their hands in faraway places—and let us pray for their safety, comfort and eventual return to their homeland.

The editors and staff of The Criterion extend to its readers and advertisers best wishes for a Joyous Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Barbarism returns to South Africa

By GARY MacEOIN

THE regression from civilization to barbarism under Nazi and Communist dictatorships during the twentieth century was marked by many inhuman actions. Not less serious, and probably even more harmful in the long run to the forward march of mankind, was the perversion of law to serve political purposes. Few of the achievements of the Judeo-Christian culture did more for the dignity of man than the formulation and gradual implementation of the rule of law, the concept that every individual's rights are the same, and that they will be equally protected and vindicated by the courts.

The reflection is not dictated by the foolish attempt of an aging general to turn draft boards into courts for determining if draft laws had been violated and meting punishment to those they convicted without due process. The public outcry against that outrageous usurpation of power brought prompt redress from the Attorney General and an assurance that we shall continue in the United States to enforce law in the manner provided under the Constitution.

The case I have in mind is far more monstrous. Those involved are not U.S. citizens, but they are men whose human rights and fundamental freedoms the United States is committed to protect by what is presumably the most solemn international treaty it ever signed, the Charter of the United Nations.

The victims are 35 members of the Ovambo tribe in South-West Africa, a territory controlled by the United Nations under Article 77 of the Charter. Last year, the General Assembly terminated the authority of South Africa to administer the territory or legislate for it, with only Portugal and South Africa dissenting.

Ignoring that decision, South Africa is holding in its own territory 35 Ovambos seized in their homeland and transported 2,000 miles for trial before a court whose language many of them don't even understand. The law under which they are being tried did not exist when they were imprisoned. In violation of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and of all civilized jurisprudence, it makes an act a crime which was not a crime when committed.

The "criminal" act with which they are charged is terrorism. The term is so broadly defined as to include any action judged embarrassing to the administration of the state. (That should catch Senator Eugene McCarthy, if he enters the New Hampshire primary). A police officer can arrest without warrant and hold indefinitely anyone he believes to be a terrorist. Habeas corpus and bail are excluded, and nobody can see him. He cannot even consult a lawyer until the authorities choose to arraign him.

Two further provisions of the law are noteworthy. One is the presumption of guilt. A person charged with terrorism is adjudged guilty until he can prove his innocence "beyond a reasonable doubt." The possibility of such proof is, of course, non-existent for the 35 Ovambos held incommunicado 2,000 miles away from home, illiterate tribesmen involved with languages they don't understand. The second point is the punishment. Terrorism carries the same penalties as treason, including death.

The British Government has so far been successful in preventing the carrying out of death sentences in nearby Rhodesia with the warning to the illegal regime in that country that every member of the government will be held personally responsible for murder. Similar notice should be served by all members of the United Nations, starting with the most powerful, on the South African regime for their piratical seizure of persons under our protection and their behavior towards their victims in violation of natural right, international law and civilized conventions.

We hear many pious platitudes from representatives of our financial, commercial and industrial interests at conventions of the National Association of Manufacturers and the National Foreign Trade Council. If they meant what they say, they could resolve an issue like this overnight. But it is one area in which they pass the buck to the government (and keep on making for themselves a quick fix bloodstained buck) without a single protest against creeping socialism.

JOHN COGLEY'S VIEW

Should big churches be a thing of past?

By JOHN COGLEY

IT'S A long, long way to Tipperary. And a longer one still, I'm afraid, to Galilee. In these words, Dick Nolan, a columnist for the San Francisco Examiner, recently concluded a 700-word protest against the building of a new cathedral for the Archdiocese of San Francisco.

Nolan is not alone. A lay group called the Ad Hoc Committee to Reinvestigate Construction of the Cathedral, as well as a number of dissatisfied priests, have also gone on record against spending millions of dollars on what the columnist calls a "slick God-orama" to replace the burned-out St. Mary's that had long been a less-than-breathtaking landmark in the city.

The controversy about spending so much on a church building "while children starve," as Nolan put it, has rocked San Francisco. With the pros and cons being broadcast on talkfest radio programs and in the press, an ancient debate has been revived throughout the city.

The opponents state their case simply. With old-fashioned journalistic directness, Mr. Nolan put it this way: "We who are tortured in every postal delivery with reminders of the world's suffering, and in every bank statement with the reminder of how little we can do about it, get a solid pain in the gut at the mere thought of lavishing $17 million on monumental theatricality."

Actually, the cost of the cathedral will not come that high. Some of the income from the $17 million drive has been earmarked for building other institutions. But the exact amount is not central to his argument; the new cathedral, by any accounting, will run into millions. The officials of the Archdiocese hold that the contributions received were earmarked for donors for the cathedral and that consequently they are bound in honor to use them for that purpose. This is an impressive case for going ahead with the plan to replace St. Mary's with an even grander structure.

But what is really bugging people is a larger question: Should the Church continue to build lavish places of worship, with the idea that "nothing is too good for God"? Does cathedral-building and the symbolism connected with it belong to another age?

There is no question about it, the great cathedrals, mosques, and temples of the world are noble monuments to the generations of men who built them and the God or gods they believed in. While the poor who lived out their lives in squalor while they were being constructed have long been turned to clay, they are still standing. It is true, also, that the presence of works of art available to all have brought pleasure and beauty into the lives of rich and poor.

But the question now, at least as some see it, is what kind of witness the Church wants to give to the contemporary world. In deciding, one should keep in mind that no one these days is impressed with displays of the Church's wealth, while many are scandalized by it. A lavish cathedral, regardless of how well it qualifies as a thing of beauty no longer does credit to the Church. Concern for the poor, and especially a high priority given to that concern, just might.

That is probably one reason why the Episcopal Bishop of New York has announced that the already-over-sized St. John the Divine Cathedral on Morningside Heights will not be completed in the foreseeable future. Again, Bishop James A. Pike, who did manage to complete San Francisco's lovely Grace Cathedral before he resigned, said recently that he no longer believes that the project was worth all the effort he put into it.

The Episcopal Bishop of San Francisco, incidentally, has offered to share Grace Cathedral with the Archdiocese of San Francisco, but the offer has not been taken up. Such collaboration would do credit to both Churches, especially if the poor and needy were to gain the immediate benefits. But it seems almost inevitable that the present plans for a new St. Mary's will be carried through, protest or no.

The controversy, however, has focussed attention on an issue that just will not go away. It is particularly pointed at this time when so many convents, monasteries, seminaries, and novitiates are emptying out, either because of a shortage of candidates or because the communities they once housed in isolated elegance are moving to where the action is.

Meanwhile, grand establishments are still being built. For example, I know of one religious order with three seminary plants standing practically empty, and of another order knee-deep in a fund raising campaign to build a new one.

The Catholic edifice complex, alas, is not easily exorcised.

OPINIONS

Cogley column

To the Editor:

Why was John Cogley disappointed that the U.S. Bishops agreed? "A house divided against itself will fall." Oh, I'll admit if just one bishop had disagreed and called the newspapers, he'd have made headlines. As it was, I read little about their statement and only on the back pages of our newspapers. There was probably a lot of discussion before the unanimity took place. That was what their purpose was in meeting.

Another point: what is a "high percentage" in favor of celibacy? Does Mr. Cogley know? Is it 50% or more, or is it 10% or more? I've not seen a poll with the 50%, which would indeed be a high percentage. Let the Criterion take a poll of our Indiana priests to see what the percentage would be.

A very good article on the Dutch catechism is in the Sunday Visitor, December 10, issue. I can't see the bishops going for the Dutch catechism on the two subjects that were discussed, birth control and original sin.

The editorial on "Muzzled clergy" was unfair in the presumption of Rev. Lewis asking President Lyndon Johnson a question on Vietnam, and he in turn could not get up and answer the question. Surely the President should be allowed to go to church without being condemned publicly for the war in Vietnam.

Please also tell Mr. Cogley there aren't sounds of discontent in every corner of American Catholicism. Tell him to quit generalizing, but just give us the facts.

Mrs. R. V. Terre Haute, Ind.

Vietnam

To the Editor:

The "cold war," "China," Vietnamese "civil war" are the three discussion levels of our confused involvement in Vietnam, i.e. our stumbling into it and not knowing why. Are we fighting a so-called monolithic Communism? What about Latin America, Italy, and Yugoslavia? Maybe the real enemy is poverty. Are we irrationally fearful of China, and did we accidentally meddle into a civil war?

I will list reasons why many, including myself, think it's impossible to support the present military escalation in Vietnam, while necessarily refraining from criticizing individual bravery: 1) Immorality of the warfare, e.g. civilian casualties, using napalm and white phosphorus, defoliating the crops, torturing prisoners; and questioning our very right to be there, e.g. against the Geneva accord, SEATO, and our Constitution. 2) Moral anguish is increased by the inconsistency between our stated aims and their actual consequences: e.g., we're told that the escalated war will stem communism, quickly finish the war, cut down infiltration to the south, and gain the confidence of the remaining world. 3) The anguish is deepened by the discrepancy between what we are told by our government and what we discover is actually taking place, i.e. credibility gap, e.g. as proven in these three cases (New York Times, July 1, 1966): "other side desires not to negotiate"; "Administration is ready to negotiate anytime, anywhere"; "controlling public information." 4) The anguish is intensified in realizing not only what the war is doing to those we devastate, but also by recognition of "what it is doing to us," e.g., politically equating dissent with disloyalty; economically hurting our domestic program; morally numbing our consciences and (Continued on page 16)

QUESTION BOX

Why is confession still necessary?

By MSGR. R. T. BOSLER

F. NOW since Vatican Council II, we can form our own judgment about everything and do more or less as we please, so long as we love everybody, there is no need for confession of sins anymore is there? A. There appears to be a serious flaw in your reasoning. So long as we love everybody we can not "do more or less as we please," for we must show our love by doing what pleases upon knowledge of God's laws others—including God. If we would truly love God and our fellowmen without failing, we would be without sin and hence would not need confession. But, as far as I know, Vatican Council II did not discover a way to eliminate sin. It is true that Vatican Council did encourage Christians to be more self-reliant and to accept their responsibility to make moral judgments for themselves, but it advised them that such moral judgments must be based upon knowledge of God's laws

BETHLEHEM—Located 12 miles south of Jerusalem in the Judean Hills, the small village is dominated by the bell tower of the Church of the Nativity. The church is built over the reputed site of the manger in which the infant Jesus was born.

THE HOLY FATHER'S MISSION AID TO THE ORIENTAL CHURCH

It's cold in the Holy Land at night, and families uprooted by the war in June sleep huddled on the ground. They're lucky to have a "pup-tent" to keep out the wind and rain. The new refugees number at least 250,000, most of them penniless and without work. Pray God they'll be spared epidemics that come from hunger. In Bethlehem Carol Hunnybun and our lay volunteers are cooking hot meals for thousands of hungry school children, helping to keep them in school. It's a practical way to make peace. Refugee teen-agers—with hammers and pliers, not guns, in their hands—are becoming carpenters and electricians in the century-old Salesian Fathers' school, thanks to $275 scholarships from readers of this column. And at the Pontifical Mission Orphanage Sister Elizabeth Marie is making old dresses look like new for the 50 little homeless girls "adopted" ($10 a month) by our readers. "Peace is the fruit of moral force—human good—not of the force of arms," Pope Paul said recently in reference to the Holy Land. He asks us to pray (and work) for peace, "a gift of love, strong and courageous, which only Christ can give." We thank you for your goodness and your love.

How to make peace? Sick babies in East Jordan get tender, loving, free medical care in the baby clinic in Zerka run by lay apostle, Claire Glorieux—Will you give her a hand? For costly, imported medicines she needs only $25 a week in '68 ($100 a month, $1,200 all told). Please help Claire save babies' lives. We'll deliver these immediately, in your name, to war victims desperately in need of them: a family size tent ($85), a sewing machine ($50), a bicycle for a nurse ($25), soap and talc for babies ($20), Braille books for the blind ($10), a kerosene stove ($6), a blanket ($2), a lamp ($1).

For tax purposes, save your cancelled checks. And remember, your stringless gifts in any amount ($5,000, $1,000, $500, $100, $50, $25, $10, $5, $2) help the neediest whoever they are!

Day of Peace

(AN EDITORIAL) POPE PAUL has summoned Catholics and men of good will everywhere to celebrate this New Year's Day, and every future New Year's Day, as a Day of Peace.

The burden of the Pope's message is one he has enunciated time and again throughout his reign—the horrors of war already engulfing part of the world are catastrophic in themselves, but even more terrible when contemplated in the light of extending the holocaust to more millions of the world's peoples.

Further, the Pope expresses anxiety over "the danger, today tremendously increased, of recourse to frightful weapons of extermination." The weapons, he says, represent vast expenditures which rightly should be spent alleviating grave needs which hinder the development of more primitive nations and societies.

He urges support of organizations promoting cooperation among nations, asking that prestige and confidence surround their work. In this respect, the message hopefully will boost revived efforts to bring the Vietnam war before the United Nations. A very serious move in that direction is being taken by powerful forces within the U.S. Senate. It is a long over-due move.

Hawkish appraisers of the papal message are tiptoeing over the highlights and landing with a vengeance upon a so-called denunciation of draft dodgers. The Pope, however, makes clear-cut distinctions among conscientious objectors, sincere pacifists and mere cowards seeking to evade personal risk.

His statement that "peace is not pacifism" indeed has had repercussions—largely, we feel, because of a problem of semantics and nuance. The World Council of Churches refrained from immediately endorsing the Pope's proposal, noting it was responding to his appeal but making it clear it disagreed with certain points.

Some feeling within the council was that the Pope did not allow full range to the proposition that men, nations and church bodies all must recognize that men of conscience differ as to method and obligations in pursuing peace.

Though the Pope never has favored peace at any price, he specifically and implicitly has provided for conscientious objection to war and to military service.

Hopefully, the main thrust of the message will not be diverted by the side issue of the nature of pacifism. The call for a Day of Peace is loud and clear. Pacifism can be analyzed at length later. The New Year must begin with prayer.

WHAT OF THE DAY

A Christmas wish

By REV. JOHN DORAN

WORD which comes up frequently at Mass, and shows up much more prominently in the English language Mass, but does not carry the force it should, is the word "peace." The word does not convey to the people of the congregation the full message which the Church has in mind when she uses it, or the great gift which Christ implied when He said: "Peace be with you."

We often think of peace, it seems to me, as just the absence of conflict. We consider our nation to be at peace when we are not at war. We think of people keeping the peace when they are simply not breaking the law. We talk of a peace bond when we mean merely staying away. Peace has become for us a symbol for not being in battle.

But that is a terrible way for us to describe peace. It is like describing health as not being sick. It's a negative description, and as such does not give the full flavor of the reality. It would be like saying of a girl's beautiful blond hair, "It's not brunette."

table all aligned toward each other in the order of friendship can be a wonderful experience. Let one or two of them disturb this order by anger or unkindness, let one or two of them get out of the orbit of friendship or cordiality, and one no longer has a peaceful dinner party. The order of things is disturbed.

Let your body and soul be functioning orderly and well, and you feel grand; but let some part of your body or your psyche "kick up," and your peaceful feeling of well being goes out the window. The order has, once again, been disturbed.

When I say "peace be with you" then, I mean: May things be in order with you and for you. I mean that I hope God has His rightful place at the head of things in your

Monsignor Goossens Says: WILL SOMEONE PLEASE GIVE HIM A PUSH? When you see your healthy children at play, think of this Polynesian boy. Crippled as a child, he needs sulphone to stop the progress of leprosy. One year of treatment often stops it completely—and this for as little as five dollars. Of the 15 million suffering lepers, only two and a half million are receiving treatment. Millions could be cured if enough people cared to give lepers the $5 "push" they need to live. # Eight teams still in Quiz Contest

Eight teams remain in the annual CYO-Criterion Quiz Contest after last Sunday's third round results. The field will be cut in half before the next edition of The Criterion appears on January 5.

Third round results included: Bracket No. 1—St. Joan of Arc No. 2 130, Our Lady of Lourdes No. 3 90; St. Barnabas No. 2 130, St. Roch No. 2 40.

Bracket No. 2—St. Mark No. 2 70, Lourdes No. 1 110, St. Catherine No. 2 90.

Bracket No. 3—St. Pius No. 2 90, Holy Name No. 3 70; St. Joan of Arc No. 1 120, St. Christopher No. 3 60.

Bracket No. 4—Our Lady of Lourdes No. 2 110, St. Joan of Arc No. 3 100; St. Barnabas No. 1 over St. Malachy No. 1 by forfeit.

The quarter-final pairings scheduled to be held Wednesday, Jan. 3, at 7 p.m. are: Bracket No. 1—St. Barnabas No. 2 at St. Joan of Arc No. 2; Bracket No. 2—St. Mark No. 2 at Our Lady of Lourdes No. 1; Bracket No. 3—St. Joan of Arc No. 1 at St. Pius No. 2; and Bracket No. 4—Our Lady of Lourdes No. 2 at St. Barnabas No. 1.

Semi-final rounds will be played January 5 at neutral sites with moderators to be provided by the CYO Office. Finals are tentatively set for January 11 on WFBM Radio. Cash prizes and trophies will be awarded.

'100' LEAGUE RUNNERS-UP—Things didn't turn out quite the way the fans from St. Catherine's, Indianapolis, had planned on the final day of the 1967 CYO Football championships, because their boys lost two close decisions in the title games. But the losses didn't diminish the achievements of the parish's football program, which turned out two finalists in one season. These "100" Leaguers share the spotlight with their older brothers, after another successful season which saw the St. Catherine's "100" record grow to include eight division titles in nine years, plus three league co-championships... the best parish mark, by far, in the history of the CYO "100" program. In making it to the final game, St. Catherine survived a rugged campaign in Division Three, struggled to a 4-6 tie with St. Andrew in the first round of the play-offs, defeated St. Monica's Division One kings in the second round, and finally lost to St. Andrew in the re-match, 7-0. Father Thomas Braidembach, the CYO Priest Moderator, is at the left in the back row. Next to him are Assistant Coach Tim Hayes, Assistant Coach Don Cunningham, and Head Coach Mike McHugh.

Plan to aid programs in parishes

The CYO Office this week announced the inauguration of a CYO Unit Improvement Year program, to be assisted by the organization's Public Relations Advisory Committee.

Goal of the promotion, according to a spokesman, is to produce quality parish units by rounding out the CYO program on the local level. Specific aims will include concentration on better communications through a newsletter or newspaper and better organized adult level participation.

The latter aim will be implemented with the scheduling of an Adult Leadership Convention, tentatively slated for March 3. The convention will have a series of panels on the various programs and problems of youth.

Plans were also advanced for sponsoring competition for the best parish youth newspaper, with the award to be presented at the Leadership Convention. Task forces of adults experienced in CYO work will be organized to help other parishes in their development plans.

The CYO Priests' Advisory Board will join the Public Relations Committee in planning the March convention.

CYO NOTES

The CYO Office has sent a mailing to school principals this past week clarifying previous information about the forthcoming Archdiocesan Science Fair, tentatively set for Sunday, March 10, at Little Flower parish, Indianapolis. School officials are asked to return the questionnaire by January 5 indicating whether individual school science fairs will be held prior to the Archdiocesan Science Fair.

Three holiday basketball tournaments are underway or will be held within a few days. Little Flower parish is hosting an eight-team Cadet "B" Tourney from December 26-29. Twenty-eight teams are entered in the Our Lady of Lourdes annual Cadet Tourney, being held from December 19 through January 6. Holy Spirit parish's "56" League Tourney got underway December 19 with 20 teams.

Tourney slated for high schools

INDIANAPOLIS — Chattrand High School will host the annual Holiday Basketball Tournament for Catholic secondary schools. Chattrand will meet Chattrand in the opening game at 7 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 28. At 8:30 p.m. the same evening, Ritter plays Seeecina Memorial.

Winners are scheduled at 8:30 p.m. the same evening. Ritter plays Seeecina Memorial.

Winners are scheduled at 8:30 p.m. the following evening, with a consolation game to be played at 7 p.m.

Greetings

St. Joan of Arc parish will sponsor its second annual Junior CYO Girls' Volleyball Tourney on January 6-7. The first 18 teams responding to the invitation will participate.

Entry blanks for the annual Junior CYO Style Show are due at the CYO Office by January 4. Holy Name parish will host the event on Sunday, Jan. 21.

Greetings

Father Donald Schneider, William S. Sahn and the staff of the Archdiocesan CYO Office extend sincere greetings to the priest moderators, adult volunteer workers and participants in the CYO program throughout the Archdiocese.

VIEWING WITH ARNOLD

Gone With Wind still packs them in

By JAMES W. ARNOLD

ONE With the Wind is the average man's all-time favorite movie...

and a covey of characters, ranging from Scarlett O'Hara to Mammy...

It is also amazing how well Scarlett, for all her moral defects, suits the dream image of many American women...

Why so popular? GWTW is a glamorous, old-fashioned romance, loaded with dramatic love scenes...

For both sexes, the story also neatly splits and personifies the eternal dilemma of mate-selection...

old back-lot sets) is more apparent now. The scarcity of exterior action, especially during a war, and the use of sets over locales...

All this may help explain the film's popularity, and also why highbrow critics have never liked it.

Fleming's real skill comes across in less vivid moments: when Rhett returns from London, and with just a few glances and cuts, the cold relationship with Scarlett is renewed...

hearted madam, the melodramatic accidents and coincidences, the stereotyped Negroes who are either lovable (in their way) or stupid.

For all the dated, embarrassing treatment of the Negro, it is true that Flattie McDaniel's Mammy is a real human being whom one irresistibly admires and loves...

The Butterfly McQueen character could be taken as a pit-down, but she performs a fascinating function as a kind of double for Scarlett, acting out exactly the selfish responses to the misery of the siege that the white girl also feels but dares not express.

Paul Pitz is named to Board at Marian

INDIANAPOLIS—The Marian College Board of Trustees has elected a fourth layman to membership.

Paul G. Pitz, vice-president of American States Insurance Company, Indianapolis, will begin his three-year term as trustee on January 1.

Mother Marie Dillhoff, chairman of the Marian Board, in making the announcement said that "Mr. Pitz has rendered outstanding service to the college for many years, first as a Marian Associate and later as a member of the Marian Advisory Board."

"WE BELIEVE his experience, leadership ability and his knowledge of Marian will be invaluable to the Board and the cause of the private liberal arts college."

Active in many local civic and church organizations, Pitz is recipient of the 1967 Indianapolis Brotherhood Award.

A 1942 graduate of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, he has served locally on the Boards of Goodwill Industries and the Central Indiana Better Business Bureau, and is a member of the Executive Committee of the Indianapolis Hospital Development Association and the St. Vincent's Hospital Advisory Board.

HE HAS HELD office in the Community Service Council, the Indiana Personnel Association, the Indianapolis Personnel Association, the Indiana Chapter of the Chartered Property and Casualty Underwriters (CPCU), and the Indianapolis Catholic Youth Organization.

A member of St. Michael's parish, Pitz is married and the parent of six children.

MR. PITZ

CAMPAIGN OFFICIAL—Clark Byrum, a member of Immaculate Heart of Mary parish, Indianapolis, is serving as co-chairman of the Business and Industry Section of the Marion County March of Dimes Campaign.

Three church fires in 2 years

By PAUL G. FOX

HE disastrous $500,000 fire last week at St. Michael's Church on Indianapolis' westside was the third serious fire within the past two years in Marion County Catholic parishes.

St. Plus X parish, on the far northeast side of the county, suffered a crippling blaze this past September 7. For several weeks the parish gathered for late Sunday Masses at the nearby Knights of Columbus hall until $25,000 in repairs were completed about the first of November.

Nativity parish, located in the southeastern portion of the county, was without a church following a fire there two years ago. The frame building, a converted barn, was completely destroyed and later razed. Since that time the parish has been worshipping in the school cafeteria. A new, 600-seat edifice was recently started there with completion scheduled next year.

At St. Michael's parish, all daily and Sunday Masses will be scheduled in the church basement following the two-alarm fire of undetermined origin which swept through the structure's first floor on Wednesday, Dec. 13.

The blaze destroyed the church's main altar and portions of its ceiling. Walls were also charred and new carpeting was ruined. Msgr. Richard Kavanagh, the pastor, told The Criterion that facilities at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, the Wesley Methodist Church, Marian College, Ritter High School, Brebeuf Preparatory School and the Riverside Park auditorium were offered to the parish for its Masses.

Inspection of the church basement, however, indicated its safety, and the decision was made to celebrate Masses there for the convenience of parishioners.

Ritter High School loaned its altar and lecterns and the basement stage is being used as a sanctuary. Folding chairs have been set up and the Sisters of St. Francis have donated vestments and altar linens. A parishioner has also donated an organ to replace one ruined in the fire.

General estimates of repairs are being made this week, Msgr. Kavanagh said.

AROUND AND ABOUT—Principal speaker at the National Honor Society induction ceremony held this past Monday at Cathedral High School was Rabbi Murray Saltzman of the Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation Temple. Twelve seniors and 19 juniors became members in the Cathedral chapter of the honorary.

Hammond-born Bob Dolan, a junior attending St. Meinrad Seminary College, has recently released an album of unusual Christmas carol arrangements entitled "The Many Moods of Christmas." The 23-year-old seminarian, an independent seminary student, founded his own recording company three years ago. During the late 1950's and early 1960's he traveled in the South and West with road shows primarily in the rock and roll field. His previous album, called "Guitar & Mandolin" sold over 78,500 copies. . . . Two Benedictine nuns and two seniors at Our Lady of Grace Academy, Beech Grove, recently participated in a Teen Encounters Christ (TEC) Week-end in Battle Creek, Mich. Attending were: Sister Evelyn Eckert, School Office supervisor; Sister Mary Clarence Gardner, junior mistress at Our Lady of Grace Convent; and OLGA seniors Peg Dever and Barbara English. The relatively new religious education program is now in its third year in the Lansing (Mich.) where to date 2,700 high school seniors, 200 priests, 100 Sisters and 600 laity have experienced it. According to Sister Evelyn, TEC originated from the Notre Dame Study of Catholic Elementary and Secondary Schools, which revealed that the religion program in many Catholic schools is likely the weakest element in the curriculum. . . . Best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. James P. Warranburg, members of Our Lady of Lourdes parish, Indianapolis, on the occasion of their 25th Wedding Anniversary on Christmas Eve, Dec. 24. . . . The St. Meinrad Archabbey Monastic Choir, directed by Father Columba Kelly, will appear in a 30-minute television program Christmas Mass on WTVV, Channel 7, Evansville. The taped program, narrated by Father Gregory Chamberlin, will feature traditional carols and other liturgical music. . . . Chuck Schisla, radio and television personality the past several years at WLW-I, Channel 13, Indianapolis, will assume new duties January 2 with the Archdiocesan Radio and Television Apostolate. The Cathedral High School grad is a graduate of Butler University's Radio and TV Department.

CCD GRADUATION—Certificates were presented recently to 212 graduates of Fraternity of Christian Doctrine classes held this fall at Chatham High School and Our Lady of Grace Academy. Coadjutor Archbishop George J. Biskup, who celebrated a special Mass for the graduates in Little Flower Church, also distributed graduation certificates, assisted by Msgr. James Galvin, Archdiocesan CCD Director. One-hundred and sixty-five of the CCD graduates were enrolled in the introductory course while 47 were advanced students. Priest instructors were: Father Patrick Kelly, Father Patrick Smith, Father Lawrence Voelker, Father John Recap and Father Francis Bryan. Sister Evelyn Eckert, O.S.B., a School Office supervisor, is CCD coordinator. A total of 1,362 adults in the Archdiocese have received CCD certificates during the past three years.

GRINCH OF THE YEAR AWARD—Candidate for the Grinch of the Year Award is the vandal(s) responsible for stealing 400 outdoor light bulbs adorning eight Christmas trees at the entrance to St. Paul Hermitage, Archdiocesan Retirement Home, at Beech Grove. According to Sister Rosemary Braun, O.S.B., administrator, the theft took place between 6:30 and 7 p.m. Tuesday evening. The bright colored decorations, which brighten the lives of the 95 residents at the Hermitage, were replaced the following day at a cost of more than $40.

KC membership drive is announced on state level

Robert S. Selvaggi, State Deputy support for the authority of the Holy Father. Columbus, has announced participation of the Indiana Juris-All K of C councils in Indiana diocesan in a move to reaffirm will encourage Catholic laymen to become enrolled in the Knights of Columbus under the theme, "Design for '69: Reaffirmation of Faith," a personal pledge reaffirming their recognition of the ecclesiastical supremacy of the Holy Father.

Selvaggi said that the number of applicants will be forwarded to Supreme Knight John W. McDevitt, who will present this, together with the total number of applications from councils throughout the Order, to the newly appointed Apostolic Delegate in the United States, Archbishop Luigi Raimondi by the Supreme Officers and Board of Directors of the Knights of Columbus in Washington, D.C., on January 27, 1968. Results from Canada, Mexico and the Philippines will be forwarded to the Apostolic Delegates in those countries.

The Indiana State Council is now engaged in a two-year membership campaign titled "Design for '69." "Reaffirmation of Faith" will be a phase of the over-all campaign. Willard R. May of Crown Point is state chairman for the program.

'Day of Peace' slated

"THE CATHOLIC Church," continued Pope Paul, "will call the attention of its children to the duty of observing the Day of Peace with the religious and moral expression of the Christian faith, but it considers its duty to remind all those who agree on the opportunities of such a day of some points which ought to characterize it."

Included among these "points," he said, are the "necessity of defending peace in the face of dangers which always threaten it, the danger of the survival of selfishness in relations among nations, the danger of violence into which some populations can allow themselves to be drawn by desperation at not having their rights to life and human dignity recognized and respected."

Pope Paul emphasized that the "foundation of peace is a new spirit which must animate co-existence between peoples, and a new outlook on man, his duties and his destiny. Much progress must still be made to render this outlook universal and effective."

The United Nations and other international organizations concerned with world peace, he said, "must be supported by all, must become better known and be provided with the authority and means fit for their great missions."

He suggested that the Day of Peace he was advocating "must honor these institutions and surround their work with prestige, with confidence and with that sense of expectation that will keep alive in them the realization of their most serious responsibility, and keep strong the consciousness of the charge which has been entrusted to them."

The Pope went on to warn that peace "cannot be based on a forced rhetoric of words which are welcomed because they answer to the deep genuine aspirations of humanity, but which can also serve, and unfortunately have sometimes served, to hide the lack of true spirit and of real intentions of peace, if not indeed to mask sentiments and actions of oppression and party interests."

No one can speak of true peace, he maintained, unless respect and recognition are given to its foundations, namely, "sincerity, justice and love in the relations between states and within the limits of each nation in the relations of citizens with each other and with their rulers."

There must also be as foundations for peace, the Pope continued, "freedom of individuals and of peoples in all their expressions — physical, cultural, moral and religious."

Otherwise, he cautioned, "it is not peace that will exist, even if perchance oppression is able to create the external appearance of order and legality, but an unsuppressable growth of revolt and war."

POPE PAUL, in addressing part of his message to Catholic bishops and faithful, told them that he was prompted to issue his appeal for peace prayers because he saw peace being "threatened so seriously and with intimations of terrible events which may prove catastrophic for entire nations and perhaps even for a great part of mankind."

His peace plea also was being issued, he said, "because we would not wish even to be rebuked by God and by history for having kept silent in the face of the danger of a new conflagration between peoples which as all know could take on sudden forms of apocalyptic awfulness."

Space-age basilica located in ancient city of Nazareth

NAZARETH — A space-age basilica is rising in this ancient city over ruins which date from the earliest days of Christianity. The Crypt of the round-domed, cruciform Basilica of the Annunciation is scheduled to be opened by the end of this year, according to the Italian Franciscan Fathers in charge of its construction. In the upper church there is still much to do. "Perhaps it will take a few years more," they said. Beneath the massive white stone structure lie valuable archeological finds which have led some experts to conclude they have found here the most ancient existing proof of devotion to Mary, and the most ancient evidence of a Christian community which still observed the prescriptions of the Mosaic law. If their findings and the hypothesis projected from them are correct, then what lies beneath the basilica is a very early Christian church in the form of a synagogue which may have been the place of worship of near relatives of the Holy Family. ACTUALLY, there are several layers of ruins under the new basilica, testifying to an almost uninterrupted chain of Christian worship on this spot since the burgeoning of Christianity. Immediately below the present terrain are ruins of a massive Crusaders' church dating from the 12th century. Beneath that, mosaics have been discovered which give evidence of a fifth-century Byzantine church. The most recent discoveries tell of a pre-Byzantine church in the shape of a synagogue and further down still, grottoes which date from the beginning of the Middle Bronze age about 1500 B.C. The excavations began in 1955, preliminary to the construction of the new basilica, under the direction of Florence-born Father Belarmino Bagatti, O.F.M., Roman architect Antonio Barluzzi had been commissioned during the Second World War to draw up plans for the project. He finished in 1955, proposing the design of a completely circular church. The cornerstone was actually laid for this church in 1954. In 1959, Count Enrico Galeazzi, architect of the Sacred Apostolic Palaces at the Vatican, made a drastic change in plans, rejecting the circular church concept and ordering that the new basilica be constructed in cruciform, along the lines of—and over the ruins of—the cruciform Crusaders' church. Another architect, Prof. Giovanni Muzio of Milan University, was given the commission, but received no money except living expenses. Before his final plan was worked out, he had made thousands of drawings. Barluzzi died in 1960. Some said he died of a broken heart after his designs were rejected—a work which he considered the crowning achievement of his career. Among his lasting monuments, however, are the shrine church in the Garden of Gethsemane in Jerusalem and the Church of the Transfiguration atop Mount Tabor in northern Israel. Although he maintains the greatest respect and admiration for Barluzzi, Father Bagatti told NC News Service that it seems "providential Rome decided against the circular design. Its specifications called for foundations which would have destroyed all traces of the pre-Byzantine synagogue-church which we later discovered while excavating for the cruciform church." A SHORT AND slightly bent man, possibly in his late 60s, Father Bagatti has been in Nazareth since 1935. He has written several books on excavations in Holy Places including "The Church of Circumcision," on primitive Judeo-Christians, in which he collaborated with theologian Father Emanuele Testa, O.F.M. He has lost none of the first enthusiasm he experienced when the pieces of his archeological jig-saw puzzle first began to fall into place during 1960. It was then his team discovered the first startling evidence: traces of a church in the form of a synagogue whose architectural style strongly indicated it was from the second century. Among the valuable "traces" archeologists look for in such cases are "graffiti" or writings which may have been scribbled on various levels of wall plaster. The custom prevails to this day of writing names on the walls of shrines and monuments as a personal memento of a visit, or sometimes even a sort of tangible request for a blessing. Custodians of shrines and monuments consider such writings a nuisance and plead with visitors: "Don't deface the walls." But to an archeologist, such scribbles can be the "open sesame" to new worlds of discovery. Such was the case at Nazareth. Removing 80 stone columns of the fifth-century Byzantine ruins, Father Bagatti's team discovered scribbles on plaster fragments underneath. One of them read: "Ave Maria:" another: "In this holy place I have written my name..." And perhaps the most interesting: "Christ, Son of God, have mercy on us." IN A THIRD layer of plaster, they found a coin dating from the fourth century, strong evidence to support the claim that the church at least predated that time by two layers of plaster. The "Ave Maria" inscription and other indications led Father Bagatti to the hypothesis that here was the earliest known evidence of devotion directed to the Blessed Virgin Mary; he places it sometime within the second century. The only competition, he said, would be a fresco representation of Mary in Rome's catacombs of St. Priscilla, which some ascribe to about 150 a.d. supporting evidence that there were Christians who kept the Jewish observances separate from the non-circumcized until the fifth century in the Holy Land; that Christian gentiles invaded Palestine in the fourth century; that the Emperor Constantine solidified the latter's influence with a law in 333 a.d.; and that this law was imposed on Nazareth in the fifth century. IN DESIGNING the new basilica, the architect has left as many traces of this early Christian cult in evidence as was physically possible, incorporating them into the new structure. The contract for construction of the basilica was signed September 30, 1960. A separate contract for the cupola came later. According to Father Benedetto Antonucci, O.F.M., an architect graduate of the University of Rome who has directed construction from the beginning, the basilica will reach completion at a cost of more than $1.5 million counting material and craftsmanship. A good deal of the money, he said, came from U.S. Catholics through donations to the Franciscan Commissariat in Washington, D.C. Though mostly widow's mites, he said, one was a bequest of $50,000 for the sanctuary. Other money has come from all over the world, including a donation from Canadian Catholics to build a chapel dedicated to the Franciscan saints. Funds by and large represent special collections, he said. None of the money collected in parishes yearly on Good Friday for maintenance of the Holy Land shrines was used. Though in general following the lines of the 12th-century Crusaders' church underneath, the new structure is smaller and shorter 70 meters long and 25 wide. Within its 6,000 cubic meters' space are two complete churches, an arrangement called (Continued on page 13)

Early Christmas in Quebec

By FRANCIS HOWARD There is no part of the New World where Christmas has been celebrated so long and so continuously as in Quebec. In the Jesuit Relations one finds this memorable account of how French Canada's pioneer settlement celebrated the Feast Day: "1645, December 25. The first bell was rung at eleven o'clock, the second a little before the half-hour, and immediately after we began to sing two carols, "Venez, Mon Dieu" and "Chantons Noel". . . . We finished carols a little before midnight, and proceeded without delay to the "Te Deum"; and a little after this was done we fired off a cannon for the midnight signal, and Mass began."

Daughters' rivalry upsetting to widow

fuses to pick up or help with housework.

HAVE three daughters one of whom is married. Another is married and divorced, but has returned home to live. My husband is deceased. My youngest daughter is thirty-two, and the other two, twenty-two, do not get along. Mary, my youngest, seems to panic if I am late and fail to call. She wants to be with me at all times, but her older sister, Peg, resents this and doesn't want her. They quarrel frequently, and Peg is annoying because she is sloppy and re-

Your basic problem, Dorothy, is a complex of two rather dependent daughters, both competing for your time and affection plus the frustrations and bitterness of Peg not uncommon following a divorce. The age differential also enters the picture, but frankly, from a psychological point of view it is difficult to determine which girl is really younger. Peg seems to be suffering from regression, that is, she is reverting to an earlier type of behavior not unusual in a teenager, but scarcely adequate in a woman of twenty-two. Both of them do need you. Mary, because of her age and the loss of her father, is clinging to you. She has only one parent now, and I am inclined to believe that the loss of her father affected her deeply. Hence, her need for your attention and affection have doubled. But your older daughter also needs you. She too has had a traumatic experience. Despite what parents claim, it is just about impossible to treat all children equally. The tone of your letter implies that Mary has the inside track with you.

Peg is probably not unaware of this and hence makes demands on you that are unrealistic. Nevertheless, she has suffered. For a time she enjoyed the close companionship of a husband. Even though the marriage ended in divorce, there must have been a period when she and her husband were close. Actually, your problem is less unusual than you may think. Sibling rivalry is rarely absent from any family although perhaps less acute than in your own case. How does one deal with it?

Perhaps the best approach is to try to understand as fully as possible the different personalities of children and the strength of their needs.

As your teen-ager matures, more and more of her time will be spent outside the home. High school activities, dating, dances and parties will shift her interest too.

But during this transition period you have a problem, and you must try to resolve it without hurting either daughter or yourself in so far as this is possible.

Why not sit down with both daughters and try to discuss the situation as amicably as possible? Peg's age does not provide any warrant for her to expect that her younger sister will pick up after her. You should establish or reestablish certain ground rules about household chores, and these should involve Peg's participation as well as Mary's and yours.

Both of these girls still require some guidance and you are the best person to provide it. Don't let either one down.

for by sloping terrain and the need to provide for regular parish functions as well as special pilgrimage events.

The tower or "crypt church," which will be ready soon, will hold about 2,000, half of them seated. When the upper church is finished, it will normally seat about 600, but Father Benedetto hopes as many as 2,000 can fit in on special occasions. The crypt will become a parish church for Latin-rite Arab Catholics.

SOME HAVE said the basilica costs too much money—even that it is a useless expenditure," he said. "In partial response I would observe that the Arabs of Nazareth are mostly stone masons and that the new buildings are mostly of stone. Thus construction of the basilica has been a great financial help to the Arab community here. At least 100 families have lived entirely on this work during the years of construction."

He noted too that almost all those who worked on the basilica have become financially well-established and were able to weather the storm of the pre-war Israeli recession which hit Arab citizens hardest. Throughout the project, the Franciscans have insisted that most of the laborers be local — therefore mostly Arab — but Father Benedetto said there has been no discriminatory policy. "Jews, Moslems and Christians have worked side by side — and in spite of tensions between Arabs and Jews, we did not have a single incident among our workmen."

Though the stone was worked locally, windows and other artistic embellishments have been solicited from all over the Christian world.

NAZARETH—The town in Galilee where Jesus spent his boyhood. The church in center is the newly-completed Basilica of the Annunciation.

Space-age basilica located

Artistically, the theme of the relationship between the Old and New Testaments is maintained throughout the church. Designs in the couple, whose tip rises 57 meters from the base of the crypt, represent all corners of the world. Father Benedetto said, "The many-colored facade, depicting the elements of nature, tells of the redemption of nature itself."

"All the artistic themes throughout have been studied carefully for their theological content."

He said he hoped the basilica eventually would incorporate work from artists of all nations:

Cornerstone blessed for new cathedral

SAN FRANCISCO—Archbishop Luigi Raimondi, Apostolic Delegate in the United States, blessed the cornerstone for the new $8.5 million St. Mary's cathedral here while a dozen placard-carrying protesters marched nearby demanding that the funds collected for the cathedral be spent on low-income housing for the poor.

"We protest a cathedral of affluence and unconcern," said one of the placards. Mary Lou Burg, a spokesman of the Ad Hoc Committee to Reinvestigate Construction of the Cathedral, criticized Archbishop Joseph T. McGuicken of San Francisco for not accepting an offer by Episcopal Bishop C. Kyrner Myers of California to share the use of Grace Episcopal cathedral on Nob Hill.

ARCHBISHOP McGuicken acknowledged earlier in the week that the offer had come from Bishop Myers, and that he discussed it with the Episcopal prelate and several Episcopal officials. Archbishop McGuicken said he concluded that the "gracious" offer was not feasible mainly because of the difficulty of conflicting times of Catholic and Episcopal services.

Bishop Myers' offer was meant to tide the archdiocese over until St. Mary's is completed and not as a permanent substitute for a new Catholic cathedral.

The former St. Mary's Cathedral was destroyed by fire on Sept. 7, 1962. Construction of the new one began in January of this year after an extensive fund-raising campaign. Completion is expected about 1970.

AT A PRESS conference held in connection with the cornerstone blessing, Archbishop McGuicken discounted the significance of the protest. He implied that the people taking part were actually far less involved in helping the poor than the archdiocese is.

"They think we are out of touch with the people, but we are really in touch," Archbishop McGuicken said. "They just don't realize how much we are doing. Part of this protesting is just the spirit of the times."

The new St. Mary's Cathedral complex includes a high school, faculty residence and rectory, and will serve as a cultural and community center for San Francisco and the Bay Area. Various social and artistic activities will be planned for the center as construction continues.

TO PRESENT CHRISTMAS CONCERT—The sixth annual Advent-Christmas Concert will be given in Holy Name Church, Beech Grove, at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 24. The Men and Boys' Choir will present the "Gloria" by Vivaldi with English translation by Machlis. The Girls' Choir will join them in new and traditional songs of Christmas. An orchestra of strings, percussion, brass and organ will accompany the group. Organists are Dennis Arthur and Tip Sweeney. Jerry J. Craney is music director at Holy Name parish.

Cardinal Riberi dies at age of 70

VATICAN CITY—Cardinal Antonio Riberi died (Dec. 16) in Rome from complications of bronchial edema.

The 70-year-old cardinal, who was raised in the college of cardinals last June, had been rumored to be slated for a high Vatican post in the reorganization of the Roman Curia, the Church's central administrative offices, which is expected to be announced in detailed form before the end of the year.

Cardinal Riberi, who was born in Monte Carlo, Monaco, June 15, 1897, served as apostolic nuncio to Spain prior to his elevation to the cardinalate. He spent most of his life in the Papal Secretariat of State and diplomatic posts.

Religious education workshop scheduled

ST. MEINRAD, Ind.—Reactor who understands this can use profitably much of the current literature in this field.

The six guest lecturers will include:

- Father James DiGiacomo, S.J., head of the religion department at the Jesuit Prep school in Brooklyn, N.Y., and lecturer in Christian Anthropology both in the Fordham Religious Education Department and the Loyola (Chicago) Pastoral Institute.
- Dr. Beryl D. Orris, executive director of the Divine Work Centre of Religious Education, London, Ontario.
- Father Joseph Sullivan, O.S.C., professor of theology at the Crosier House of Studies, Fort Wayne.
- Father Donald Brooks, pastor, in the diocese of Oklahoma City.
- Brother Martin Lang, F.S.C., professor of theology at Marist College, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.
- Sister Florence Michels, O.L.V.M., theology lecturer at Victory Noll Junior College, Huntington.

The week end workshop will feature six lectures by specialists in religious education or in allied fields. Reactor panels will be composed of qualified practitioners in the field of religious education.

ACCORDING to Father O'Loughlin, the workshop is being offered for teachers of religion and "aims toward a multi-disciplinary approach to the problem of grounding religious education in man's concrete, personal existence as man-in-the-world."

"R E 70 hopes to help religious educators understand that here God is present to man and here alone can the teacher begin to expose that presence of God to the student. Only the edu-

WASHINGTON—Father John M. Comey, S.J., has been named director of the Movement for a Better World in the United States, effective January 1. Father Riccardo Lombardi, S.J., international director of MBW in Rome made the appointment.

The MBW, which conducts retreats for priests, Sisters and laity throughout this country, has its national office here. For the last 16 years Father Comey has served on the theology faculty of St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia.

TRINIDAD, Colo.—Mount San Rafael Hospital, only hospital in Las Animas county, has been offered for sale to the county by the governing board of the Sisters of Charity of Cincinnati.

The Sisters of Charity who operate the 80-year-old institution, put a $775,000 price tag on the facilities and property.

The Sisters announced in October the hospital would cease operations after Sept. 1, 1968, because of substandard building conditions.
