New changes in liturgy approved for U.S. Church

WASHINGTON—New liturgical changes, including a new set of biblical readings for weekday Masses, have been announced by the American Bishops of the Church's Liturgy Committee on March 17. The changes, which will be implemented in the United States, are part of a broader effort by the Vatican to modernize and simplify the liturgy of the Church.

Happening at the Eucharistic Congress held by Catholic University of America, the announcement followed the closing Mass of the Catholic Congress. The liturgy committee, which is responsible for the formulation of liturgical norms for the Church, has been working on the changes for several years. The new liturgical norms aim to make the liturgy more accessible and relevant to modern families and individuals.

The liturgical changes include new wording for prayers, a new structure for the liturgy, and new biblical readings for weekday Masses. The changes will be implemented over the next few years, with the aim of making the liturgy more engaging and participatory for all who attend.

Religious tensions found in Midwest

By GARY McMOND

I am just back from a two-day trip through the American Mid West, and I return with an account of the Catholic community in the part of the country that I visited. The area of interest is the Catholic section of the town of A, which is in the state of B. The Catholic section is about 25 miles away from the town center.

The tension is not an ordinary one. It has a more complex nature, and it is a struggle between people with different backgrounds and beliefs. It is a struggle between people who have different opinions and beliefs about the world and society.

The tension is not just a matter of the Catholic Church and the state of B. It is a matter of the Catholic Church and the state of A, which is about 20 miles away from the town center.

Abortion veto

Governor R. B. Bevin last Saturday further demonstrated his interest in the abortion cause by vetoing the bill that had thus far been passed by the Kentucky General Assembly. Many people had predicted that the Governor would be seen as a moral crusader in his fight against what he considered an evil practice. The veto was issued by the Governor's office and was based on ethical grounds.

For one thing, there are more than 150 women on this side of the Atlantic. For another, the Catholic Church in America is in a considerable measure an instrument left by Irishmen to be carried on with their own hands. That, like the early days of the Catholic immigrants, that they should hold that their faith and their work. Whatever the issue may be, the world today is being fought by an army of Irishmen who have been trained in the American Church.

St. Patrick

St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland, was the first to bring the Catholic faith to Ireland after it was introduced by the army. He was a great missionary and wore the Green Cross, an emblem that is still used today in Ireland.

Holy Week

Holy Week is celebrated in a variety of ways across the world. In Rome, it is marked by the processions of the Pope and other religious leaders, while in the United States, it is often observed through prayer, fasting, and reflection.

False fears

In 1896 there was a great and co-operative effort to improve the health and sanitation of the country. This was achieved through the establishment of the Department of Agriculture and the creation of the Department of the Interior.

Not for Yanks

There is some confusion as to precisely who was responsible for the massacre of the Irish in New York City. Some historians believe that the New York authorities were to blame, while others believe it was the Irish themselves.

St. Patrick's Day

St. Patrick's Day is celebrated in various ways around the world, including parades, banquets, and special Masses. In Ireland, it is the day when the wearing of green is encouraged.

Husband punishes children excessively

By JOHN J. KON, PH.D.

My husband is immature and punishes the children excessively. He does not believe in corporal punishment but instead punishes them by yelling, crying, and hitting them. He uses Verbatim on the children and makes them feel inferior. He is very jealous of the children and whenever they do something wrong, he immediately becomes angry and explodes. He has been this way since they were very young and it has never changed. He is always accusing them of things they did not do and is very critical of them. He is also very possessive of them and does not want them to have any friends or spend time with anyone else.

I am really worried about this situation and I do not know what to do. I have tried talking to him about it, but he just gets more angry and defensive. I have also tried getting help from a counselor, but he does not want to go because he feels it is not a problem. I really need help and advice on how to deal with this situation.

FAMILY CLINIC

President, Evan Williams, M.D.
Council gave women role in ‘world family’

Catholic women “fit into this world as individuals, as citizens, as strong, vital women of a world order,” said the Rev. James M. Sadler, executive secretary of the National Council of Catholic Women, at a recent gathering at the National Cathedral of the Holy Trinity in Washington, D.C.

Sadler emphasized that women’s role in the world cannot be limited to the home or the church. He said that women must take an active part in society, in politics, and in the economic life of the world.

“Women have a unique perspective and a unique contribution to make to the world,” Sadler said. “We must use our talents and skills to build a better world.”

Historian calls for clergy voice in the selection of U.S. bishops

NEW YORK—The present lack of clergy participation in the selection of Catholic bishops is “a serious lacuna” in the church’s system of governance, according to Canon Louis J. O’Connor, a canon lawyer and legal advisor to the Archdiocese of New York.

O’Connor said that the lack of clergy involvement in the selection process undermines the integrity of the church’s hierarchical structure.

He added that the current system is “opaque” and does not allow for transparency or accountability.

“Clergy should be involved in the selection process to ensure that the church is being governed in the best interests of all its members,” O’Connor said.
