Pope completes reform of the Curia

VATICAN CITY—Pope Paul VI, fulfilling a long-promised promise, has reformed the central government of the Catholic Church.

The new structure eliminates many of the Vatican’s internal problems, including the notorious “Vatican City” within the Vatican City. The reforms will also give the Pope greater control over the Church’s finances and personnel.

The Pope’s reforms include the creation of a new Secretariat for the Economy, which will manage the Church’s financial affairs, and a new Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, which will oversee the Church’s teachings.

The Pope’s reforms also include the creation of a new Congregation for the Clergy, which will focus on the training and formation of priests, and a new Congregation for the Institutes of Consecrated Life, which will oversee the religious orders.

The Pope’s reforms are part of his ongoing efforts to modernize and reform the Church, which he has said is necessary for the Church to remain relevant in the modern world.

The Pope’s reforms are also part of a larger effort to streamline the Church’s bureaucracy and reduce its complexity. He has said that the Church needs to be more efficient and effective in its mission to spread the Gospel and serve the faithful.

The Pope’s reforms are expected to be welcomed by many within the Church, who have long complained about the Church’s hierarchy and its slow pace of change. However, some may resist the reforms or be concerned about the Pope’s authority.

The Pope’s reforms are also likely to be welcomed by many outside the Church, who see the Pope as a symbol of hope and change. The Pope has said that the Church needs to be more open and inclusive in its teachings and practices.

International parley to explore abortion

By MARGARET CULLEN
WASHINGTON — The medical, ethical, moral and legal questions surrounding abortion and related practices will be explored by experts in the field, as the first part of an international parley to be held here September 6-8. For the conference, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists and the American Medical Association have been chosen to sponsor the event.

Passing by the many states that have come to the forefront of the issue, 1500 physicians from around the world are expected to attend the meeting, which will provide an opportunity for the exchange of ideas and the discussion of various viewpoints.

The parley will focus on the ethical and moral implications of abortion and related practices, as well as the medical and legal aspects. The discussions will be moderated by experts in the field, and will be open to the public.

The parley will conclude with a final discussion, which will include all participants. The final discussion will be held on the second day of the conference, and will provide an opportunity for all attendees to share their thoughts and ideas.

The parley is expected to be a significant event, and is expected to have a great impact on the way the issue of abortion is discussed in the future. The organizers are confident that the event will be a success, and that it will provide a valuable opportunity for the exchange of ideas and the discussion of various viewpoints.

Two women helping prepare for Congress of the Laity

BY JAMES L. SWINCHART
VATICAN CITY — Two women who are working to improve the lives of women in the United States and Latin America, are being honored this month as part of the celebration of the third International Congress of the Laity Apostolic, held in Rome, Italy.

They are Rosemary Glass of Boston, Massachusetts, and Mrs. Sarah Blue, of St. Louis, Missouri. Both women have been active in the work of the Laity, and have been instrumental in the development of the organization.

Miss Glass is a faithful Catholic, and has been active in the work of the Laity for many years. She has been a member of the organization since its inception, and has served in various capacities over the years.

Mrs. Blue is also a faithful Catholic, and has been active in the work of the Laity for many years. She has been a member of the organization since its inception, and has served in various capacities over the years.

The two women were chosen by the Vatican, and were selected for their work in the field of women's issues. They have both been instrumental in the development of the organization, and have been active in the work of the Laity for many years.

For their work, the Vatican has chosen to honor them with a special recognition. Both women have been selected to receive the title of "Women of the Year," and will be recognized at a special ceremony to be held in Rome.

The ceremony will be held on October 2, and will include a special mass, as well as a special award ceremony. Both women will be recognized for their work in the field of women's issues, and will be honored for their contributions to the Laity.

The ceremony will be attended by many of the leaders of the Laity, as well as many of the women who have been active in the work of the organization. The ceremony will be a special occasion, and will be a celebration of the work of the Laity, and the commitment of the women who have been active in the organization.

Father John Courtney Murray, buried at Woodstock

NEW YORK—A memorial mass was celebrated at St. Ignatius Church here Monday for the late Father John Courtney Murray, S.J., one of the world's leading experts in the field of social ethics, who was in the process of being canonized as a saint by the Vatican.

Father Murray, 73, died in Rome (Aug. 18) after a long illness. He was a Jesuit priest, and author of several works on social ethics.

The service took place at 7:30 p.m. from the church, and was attended by many of the clergy and religious of the city. The service was conducted by Father J. J. Coughlin, S.J., superior of the Jesuit province of the United States and Canada.

Father Murray was perhaps the most famous of a number of Jesuit scholars who helped shape Woodstock College's reputation as one of the leading institutions in the United States. He was a leader of the Catholic Church's social ethics movement.

The Rev. John Courtney Murray was born in New York in 1861, and was a Jesuit priest from 1884. After graduating from Fordham University, he went to Rome to continue his studies. He was ordained a priest in 1884.

In 1892, he was named superior of the Jesuit province in the United States, and in 1901, he was appointed the first rector of Woodstock College in Illinois.

His contributions to the education of Jesuit scholars and students have been recognized throughout the United States and abroad. His works on social ethics have influenced generations of Jesuits and laymen.

TO ENTER CONVENT—John Rosemary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John K. Rosemary, of 79 Union St., has entered the convent of the Sisters of St. Joseph, 120 Union St., where she will study for the religious life. She was born March 7, 1921, and will be 21 in May.

Detroit prelate drafts program for the inner-city apostolate

By R. M. M. McCONNELL KANSAS CITY, Mo.—A proposal by the Rev. Joseph H. B. Bostwick, the national Catholic Church's apostolate program for the inner-city Apostolate of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States, was announced recently.

The proposal, which was drafted by Archbishop John E. O'Connor of New York, was approved by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, and will be submitted to the Vatican for consideration.

The program, which is designed to help the inner-city apostolate, includes the following elements:

1. The establishment of a national center for the inner-city apostolate
2. The establishment of a national training program for inner-city apostles
3. The establishment of a national funding program for inner-city apostolate projects

The program is expected to be implemented within the next year.
Comment

The support expressed in these editorial columns represents a Catho-lic viewpoint—not necessarily THE CATHOLIC view. The opinion of the faithful is welcome in these columns. It is public property within the Church and is to be shared.

More advanced air

Catholics are all too aware of the hardships that come with life, the political and administrative upheaval. The Church remains the one constant in life, the one that unites us.

Free transistors

The Indian government seems willing to try anything to keep its economy on track, especially when it comes to reproductive health.

Recently the Hon. Minister announced it is about to begin a campaign to offer free transistors to all women of childbearing age. Women will have to purchase these devices themselves, but only if they still have not been sterilized. Under the new law, women who have been sterilized cannot have the procedure reversed.

But the most stringent legislation yet is still under wraps. Here again it seems to be a golden number. The Indian government is weighing the benefits of contraception against the costs of implementing such policies.

Gadgets and gimmicks have successfully diverted attention away from the real issues. Improving access to family planning services, expanding anti-natal care programs, and ensuring that women have access to quality health care are the real challenges.

John Cogley’s view

Who is to blame?

JOHN COGLEY

The latest Gallup and Harris polls indicate that President Johnson’s popularity has sunk to a new low. Only 24 percent of the American people approve of the way he is handling his job.

The rural areas and the military have long been a haven for Johnson. But the President’s image is slipping even in these bastions of support. A recent poll showed that only 17 percent of those living in rural areas approve of his handling of the Vietnam War.

In 1963, Johnson was rated highest in his political career. Since then, his approval has slipped steadily. Today, he is rated lower than any other President in modern history.

The question now is, how much will Johnson’s ratings change before mid-term elections? And how will they affect his chances of re-election?

The implications of Johnson’s declining popularity are profound. If his ratings continue to decline, it could spell disaster for the Democrats in the midterm elections. And it could also mean the end of Johnson’s political career.

Chicago cathexism uproar reveals some real issues

MERRICK, G. H. HOGGINS

In this issue, we see the Yardstick covering the issue of cathexism. The article is titled “The Yardstick” and it highlights the growing criticisms and controversies surrounding the practice of cathexism.

The Yardstick argues that cathexism is a form of spiritual manipulation that has become increasingly popular in recent years. The article cites several cases where people have been manipulated into giving up their wills to others, often in situations of emotional stress or vulnerability.

The Yardstick also points out that cathexism can be used to control people, both within religious organizations and in secular settings. The article asks us to consider how cathexism is being used to exploit people and how we can work to prevent it.

The Yardstick is a valuable resource for anyone interested in understanding the complexities of cathexism and its impact on individuals and society.

Our man in Peru reports

By PAUL S. FOX

We received a letter this week from "our man in Peru," Father Dave Hay, of Canada. The letter contained a list of the priests, brothers and nuns who now work in Peru and the number of students they educate.

After five weeks of work at the St. James Language School in Lima, Peru, he reported that the priests, brothers and nuns were busy teaching in the schools.

"However," he wrote, "the problem of education in Peru is not only limited to the schools. The government is also working on this issue." He added that the government is providing financial support to help educate more children.

Anti-peace principles gain ground, Pope says

CASTELGANDOLFO, Italy — The peace movement in the world is facing a setback as anti-peace principles are gaining ground, according to a Vatican official.

A statement released on Monday by the Vatican Press Office said that anti-peace principles are gaining ground due to the spread of violence and nationalism.

The statement said that the Vatican is committed to promoting peace and dialogue among nations.

Nervous breakdown takes varied forms

By JENNIE H. KANE, Ph.D.

What is a nervous breakdown? Two years ago a relative of mine thought that I was undergoing a nervous breakdown. I was off work for a week and I have never been well since. Now a few weeks ago, I had a spell of anxiety and I thought I was having another nervous breakdown. What is a nervous breakdown?

Nervous breakdown can refer to almost anything from a psychological personality disorder to a serious mental illness such as schizophrenia and depression and inability to function in society. It can be caused by a variety of factors, including physical, emotional, and environmental stressors.

The relative to whom you refer may have experienced a nervous breakdown and has been deemed not competent to perform every task and therefore is not capable of performing any task. The patient is not capable of performing any task. The disorder may be treated with medication and psychotherapy. The treatment is usually successful and the patient is able to resume normal life.

Frank Sinatra stars in new spy film

BY JAMES W. ANROLD

The riveting thriller, "The Naked Runner," is the engaging story of a modestly successful photographer, Richard Driscoll, who accidentally witnesses a group of nouveaux riche socialites making a big score. His life is changed forever when he is taken hostage, and his wife is later murdered by the Commies. The difference is that in "The Naked Runner," the New York runs of the film are 先 back to its original production of 1949. The film, which is a key role in the history of American cinema, is a critical and commercial success, earning high praise for its performances and direction. The film's theme of surveillance and espionage is still relevant today, making it a timeless classic.

The Supreme Court of Canada, in the case of Canadian Alien Rights, has ordered the federal government to pay damages to a former Canadian citizen who was refused the right to naturalize. The court ruled that the federal government's policy of denying naturalization to former citizens was unconstitutional. The case will now go to the Supreme Court of Canada for further review.

Five bishops call for Vietnam negotiations

Five Catholic bishops called simultaneously for an end to U.S. bombing in Vietnam and immediate negotiations among all concerned parties including the National Liberation Front to end hostilities there.

Four—Archbishop Paul J. Hidalgo of Atlanta, Bishop Victor L. Tallon of Scranton, Bishop John R. Wright of Portland and Bishop Francis X. DiLorenzo of Scranton—publicly endorsed a National Catholic bishops' letter issued July 20 by the National Catholic Welfare Conference in Washington. They made their stand public at individual press conferences the same day.

The fifth—Bishop John J. Reech of Pittsburgh—endorsed his support for the "National Letter" but postponed its announcement until a later date.
